Announcement

Bangladesh Botanical Society (BBS) has organized seven international conferences since its inception in 1972. As a continuation of this trend and Covid-19 pandemic situation, the forthcoming 8th International Botanical e-Conference will be held online on 27&28 March 2021 focusing on the plant sciences for sustainable environment and development. The Plant Science is essential in understanding and maintaining the world around us. Human beings are dependent partly or wholly on the diverse plant species available on this planet for their different sorts of activities. Plant scientists from different classical and modern disciplinary boundaries can play a pivotal role for sustainable environment and development for better wellbeing. The sustainable development is directly linked with promotion, progress and elimination of poverty and has social, economic, political and environmental dimensions. Sustainable development demands concerted efforts from all sectors to adopt or tackle changing scenarios.

Members of the Executive Committee of Bangladesh Botanical Society and Organizing Committee of the forthcoming 8th International Botanical e-Conference have the pleasure to invite you to share your research findings with the world plant scientists at the e-conference and your deliberations will enable to develop more effective policies for management of the environment and to combat global food insecurity.
